

IT took Wycombe Wanderers an hour to get going in Saturday's F.A. Cup second round tie, by which time Third Division Reading were 2-0 up.

But then the Blues showed us just why they are feared throughout F.A. Cup football with a marvellous comeback that brought them to the very edge of a draw and a replay at Elm Park.

Ian Pearson, the striker watched by Reading earlier this season, pulled a goal back after 68 minutes and frozen Loakes Park erupted. Reading withstood wave after wave of Wycombe attacks . . . Howard Kennedy sent in three shots that might have brought the equaliser but as the match passed the 90 minute mark, goalkeeper Steve Death made the most important save of the game.

A brilliant moved set up the chance for Pearson from six yards and the striker thumped in a shot that seemed a certain equaliser. But Death, the smallest goalkeeper in the Football League, instinctively stuck out his hand and deflected the drive against an upright. Reading had survived.

Wanderers must be ruefully reflecting on the number of chances they accumulated in the game but they must know that they left things too late. You can't afford to give professionals a two goal start as the Blues learnt to their cost. Nevertheless Wanderers should take a bow for the standard of football they produced in the second half which was some of their best this season.

It may sound like sour grapes but this game should never have been played. I walked over the pitch before the game and it was as solid as a rock even though the sun had been on half of it. F.I.F.A. referee John

Wycombe W. 1, Reading 2

REPORT BY STUART EARP

Homewood consulted Reading manager Charlie Hurley and Wycombe assistant boss John Reardon before the game and it was eventually decided play was possible, although Hurley was not totally in favour of playing.

The pitch was, of course, the same for both sides but for such an important game as this, I feel the teams should have had the benefit of more normal conditions.

As it was, the players did their best on the frozen surface but inevitably there were mistakes which cost Wycombe dearly.

Blues boss Ted Powell gambled in his team selection by bringing in Gavin Fraser to midfield. Gavin has only played a few games this season due to his ties with Borough Road College and his inclusion meant that Tony Horseman was made substitute while John Priestley, a midfield player, moved into the front line.

Powell's move was understandable as Reading had not seen Fraser perform before and the player has enough ability to justify a regular place in the side. Unfortunately it robbed Wycombe of a player who would have been more at home than most on the icy surface. Horseman may be reaching the end of his career but he still possesses unique balance and has that happy knack of scoring goals. We shall never know, but it could have been different if 'Bodger' had been in the side.

Several youths were thrown out of the ground after fighting in the crowd before the game but thankfully the violence subsided after the kick-off.

Wanderers seemed nervous at first as both sides tried to adapt to the surface. The match was only five minutes old when Friday cashed in on some hesitancy in the home defence. Paul Bennett sent in a deep free kick into the box where John Murray flicked the ball on. It bounced awkwardly but no-one was quick enough to clear the danger and Friday pounced to drive the ball into the roof of the net. Some felt the Reading forward had handled in controlling the ball but referee Homewood was unsighted.

The early goal had a marked effect on Wycombe's play and they were never able to get into their stride for the rest of the half. Reading looked comfortable and composed although the match was constantly interrupted by Mr Homewood's whistle. He produced the yellow card for Friday only two minutes after the opening goal for a foul on Mick Hollifield.

Wycombe produced some isolated attacks and Alan Phillips went close to repeating his feat of last year when he scored Hendon's only goal against Reading. This time Alan drove Bennett's clearance inches past the upright.

DISASTER

It was another 14 minutes before the Blues could carve out another chance when Fraser sent a 25 yard effort over the top. Then disaster struck again two minutes later.

Murray crossed hard and low from the right, inside the box. Maskell slipped as he went to save and could only get a hand to the ball. It rolled across goal to Phillips who found himself facing his own net with the ball only inches from the line. A clearance would have been dangerous and the centre half tried to play the ball away but Friday again saw his chance and rushed in to slam the ball home. Maskell would have gobbled up that cross in normal conditions.

Wanderers replied with two corners but by now Reading were full of confidence and soaked up anything Wycombe could throw at them. Just before half time though, Priestley drove a shot inches past the post when a goal could have given the Blues the vital boost they needed before the break.

The same pattern continued in the second half with Wanderers having the greater percentage of play but seldom troubling the track-suited Death. Gradually the midfield trio began to create openings with Kennedy leading the way. Howard has had his critics this season but he won't play a finer game and his hard work almost swung the game Wycombe's way.

It was Kennedy who sliced a first time shot wide in the 65th minute but two minutes later Pearson set the near 8,000 crowd alight. The ball was played out of Reading's defence to Bob Davies. Reading pushed out, hoping to catch Wanderers off side but Davies' chip was chested down by Kennedy and Pearson took his chance first time and rammed the ball past the rooted goalkeeper from 18 yards.

Friday could have sewn the game up a minute later when clean through but Maskell saved his shot at the second attempt.

With the crowd firmly behind them, Wanderers powered forward in search of more goals. Mick Hollifield broke clear on the left and crossed to the unmarked Pearson but his far post header flew just wide. Then Kennedy fired in a shot straight at Death which would have been a goal a yard either side of the keeper.

Kennedy sent Death diving full length after good work by Fraser in the 82nd minute and three minutes later a lovely move ended with Kennedy firing inches past an upright with Death again transfixed to his spot.

Reading were well and truly on the rack as Wycombe surged forward ceaselessly in the closing stages. Pearson flicked a pass to Phillips who lost his balance and sent the ball high into the crowd and then came the dramatic incident with only 20 seconds left.

Phillips set the ball up on the six yard line and Pearson looked certain to score from close range. The shot was good but Death got his fingertips to the ball, enough to deflect it onto the right hand upright. No-one could pick up the rebound which Reading cleared and 15 seconds later the referee brought the game to a close.

With a little more luck Wanderers would have been playing again tomorrow at Elm Park, probably on a proper surface. They were only inches away from a replay which prompted this apt remark from Reading's manager: "Someone up there loves me," said Hurley after the game. Someone up there didn't show much affection for Wycombe on Saturday.
